Indian proper names in early days, and Wenistingkonk and Wenigtikonk (see marriage 1139) are doubtless modifications of the Indian name spoken of in this deed.
